
Reaching Out to the Community Patch Design Contest Winner

Thank you to everyone who entered the design a patch contest for the new Reaching Out to the Community program. This patch is provided free to troops who run recruitment events within their local community. To learn more, refer to the guidelines that were provided in your Fall 2008 leader packets.

The online voting was tallied and the winner of the contest is Hannah Shea from Harrisburg. Hannah is a first year Cadette in troop 873 which meets at the Ridgeway Community Church. Hannah has been a Girl Scout since she was a Daisy. Her patch design was created as she wanted to relay the concept of a group of people coming together to help our community and the world in general. Hannah's favorite part of being a Girl Scout is being with friends and meeting new people. She also likes all the activities she does with her troop.

Good job Hannah and congratulations!
